Generative AI/ChatGPT in Scientific Research: Unveiling Biases and Discrimination

ChatGPT and other large language models (LLMs) based tools offer diverse applications in scientific practice, supporting researchers with tasks like generating research ideas, conducting literature reviews, data summaries to even proposing new experiments. Despite their potential to advance research, concerns arise about generative AI amplifying social inequalities in scientific findings. Moreover, high-income countries and privileged researchers with access to LLMs might exploit them to accelerate their own research and further widen inequalities.

In this workshop, we aim to raise awareness around the use of AI in scientific research, by understanding how these models work, identifying potential biases and ethical issues, and promoting competencies for a more responsible and transparent utilization.

Fatima Maya (Researcher in AI application in education, University of Bremen)

9.00 AM–11.00 AM | Room 201

ChatGPT for Starters – Was 'weiß' denn ein Large Language Model?

Warum eigentlich noch googlen, wenn ich doch Chatbots wie ChatGPT, Bard oder den Open Assistant ganz einfach fragen kann? Lassen Sie uns darüber diskutieren, warum wir Sprachmodellen (LLMs) nicht trauen sollten. Nach einem kurzen Impuls zu den Grundlagen von LLMs werden wir uns in der Workshop-Phase mit Problemstellungen ihrer Nutzung für den akademische Schreibprozess befassen.

Dr. Armin Glatzmeier (Trainer für Gute wissenschaftliche Praxis, FU Berlin)

12.00 AM–1.00 PM | Room 201 (big Meeting Point)

Lunch Break

12.30 AM–1.30 PM | Room 101

Conversations about Discrimination und Abuse of Power at the University
Consulting and Mentoring One-to-One. You are very welcome!

Dr.in Sarah Huch (Consultant and Coordinator for Gender & Diversity) & women's representative Christine Eßmann-Stern, Prof.in PhD Constance Scharff

1.00 PM–4.00 PM | Room 201

Flourish – unfolding your full potential
What do humans need to unfold their full potential? How can we boost our strength and better achieve our goals? Why do we need feedback, autonomy, and positive relationships to stay motivated against all odds? And how do these insights help you avoid procrastination? These are some of the questions addressed in this workshop on positive self-leadership. You will experience a stimulating mix of interaction, inspiration and life hacks based on findings from psychology, brain research and behavioral economics.

Dr.in Kerstin Humberg (Trainer in Applied Positive Psychology and Founder of Yunel)
